Soccer death was from natural causes

By ALISON ALOISIO

Medical authorities said Friday a soccer goalie who died following an apparent collision at Gould Academy died from a ruptured brain aneurysm, not as a result of the collision.

Lauren Neale-May, 14, from the New Hampton School in New Hampshire, collapsed after apparently colliding with a Gould Academy player during a junior varsity soccer game.

When she did not get up, Bethel Rescue was called, and the rescue personnel and police treated her until a LifeFlight helicopter arrived.

Bryant Pond man writes of hiking all 1,200 miles of WMNF trails

By ALISON ALOISIO

"Like you, I stretch my legs over many deliciously lonely tenths of a mile, as measured by junction signposts. Crossing Bondcliff in a windswept downpour, wallowing over five-foot drifts on Mt. Adams, trading blinks 10' to one with an owl near Nancy Pond, hearing the long legs of a coyote pacing softly by in the dark on Mt. Hale, a midnight quarrel about bedding space with a Pilot Range moose, dawn face-off with a larcenous bear in the Pemigawasset, ghostly out-of-season thumping from the mist-shrouded Madison Hut, Labrador fog on icy North Kinsman in November ... I was alone, in the societal sense, to richly experience communion in something bigger, and more ancient."

Those are the words, and the experiences, of Steve Bies of Woodstock. Last year Bies, 47, became only the second known person to hike every trail in the White Mountain National Forest.

He has written about his seven-year odyssey for "AMC Outdoors," a magazine of the Appalachian Mountain Club. His essay is scheduled to appear in an upcoming issue.

Hiking every inch of trail in the WMNF may not be as well-known an accomplishment as doing the length of the 2,160-mile Appalachian Trail. The distance Bies hiked, however, is almost the same. He trekked 2,100 miles over the course of seven years to cover the 1,200 miles of actual trails.

Understanding Bies' love of hiking and how he came to take on the marathon tour of WMNF requires going back to his younger days.

Although he spent his early childhood in Waterville, his family moved to Long Island when he was 11. He attended college at Stevens Institute of Technology in Hoboken, N.J., where he earned a degree in mathematics.

It was there he was introduced to hiking. "Three fraternity brothers and I got on the Appalachian Trail for three weeks. I had not even camped out before then," said Bies. "I got hooked. It's been a rare year I haven't done a trip since then."

Roughing it in Rochester

In his late 20s — while living in Rochester, N.Y. — Bies' interest in hiking expanded to a general interest in conservation. And it wasn't just your typical out-in-the-woods conservation. Bies and his wife started roughing it in the city.

"We were using our kerosene

THE SCHOOL OF HARD ROCKS

Despite damp weather and muddy conditions, the 11th annual Jeep Jamboree held in the Bethel area was a success, according to local coordinator Doug Wilson. Many of the jeeps said the conditions provided a good test of their driving ability and their jeeps' capabilities. Before heading out on the trails, some beginning jeeps took part in "Jeeping 101," a how-to class taught on a course set up at Doug Wilson's house. Instructors guided the jeeps over rocks and rises and through ruts so they could get a feel for how their vehicles respond in various situations. Here, instructor Jim Justnes of New Jersey guides Sandy and Ronni Brenner of Elkin, N.H., through a rock obstacle. "Unbelievable," said Ronni after bouncing through the course with her husband at the wheel. (Aloisio photo)

Owners say Mt. Abram will open on schedule

By REBECCA ZICARELLI

Contrary to rumor, Mt. Abram Ski Area is preparing to open, as usual, the week before Christmas.

Randy and Kathy Dunican, owners of the skiway since a 1998 foreclosure sale, said that preparations to open the mountain are four to five weeks ahead of schedule. They are ready to go, despite Randy's unexpected health problems.

Randy Dunican ruptured a disc in his back in July. Since then, he has suffered two strokes that have left him with a left leg that feels, he said, like a sack of potatoes.

"I'm undergoing a rigorous physical therapy regimen," Dunican said. "All the doctors and specialists tell me that if I work hard, I'll be 97 percent recovered within 12 months. If I really push it, I'll be 100 percent."

A long road to recovery

Even as Dunican recovers, he hopes to continue helping Mt. Abram recover from the problems that drove the previous owner into a foreclosure sale. "We've put everything we own into this," Dunican said. "We have to make this work."

The Dunicans have already made substantial improvements at Mt. Abram. The base lodge has been gutted and rebuilt, the ski shop has been enlarged, and plans to increase snowmaking capacity are well underway.

But with their attention focused on Randy's recovery and winter preparations, the Dunicans have not been responsive to inquiries concerning the sale of season passes and the opening date for the winter season.

That concern led to a meeting convened last weekend by the Mt. Abram Chalet Association. Members of the Mt. Abram Condo Association were invited to attend, as well.

While both groups of real estate holders are neighbors of Mt. Abram, there are no legal binds between the groups and the mountain.

In a letter to announce the meeting, sent out by the Chalet Association,

Economic study examines SAD44's micro-economy

By MICHAEL DANIELS

By the end of this week the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce expects to release a 35-page report examining a wide variety of demographic and economic statistics for the SAD44 area.

The report was prepared by the Androscoggin Valley Council of Governments. It is intended to update and elaborate on similar information compiled in the 1994 Evans Notch Economic Development and Diversification Project.

"It's a five-year snapshot of the trends identified in the 1994 report," said chamber executive director Robin Zinchuk. "We want to see if they are continuing, plateauing or falling off."

The report, she said, "is not intended to sit on a shelf and collect dust, but to provoke us to action in some form or another, to tell us if there are things we can/should be doing to stay on course."

The report is one of two information-gathering initiatives expected to be discussed at length at the Regional Economic Summit set for Monday, Oct. 23, at Sunday River Ski Resort's Jordan Grand Hotel.

The second source is the chamber's recently completed Business

Cathy DiCocco proposes renovating gas station

By ALISON ALOISIO

The Bethel Planning Board was expected Wednesday to consider a site plan application for Café DiCocco's "Main Street Market," to be established next door to the current restaurant.

The market would occupy the former gas station located at the corner of Main and Vernon streets. Most recently, the building provided the offices for Bethel Express Corp.

In a letter to the board, Cathi DiCocco, owner of Café DiCocco, said the plan is to "create an attractive building, inside and out, for the purpose of selling bakery items, soups, ready-made foods and specialty groceries."

DiCocco said she hoped the building would be renovated and

THE OPPORTUNITY HAS BEEN HERE

To the Editor:

I am writing to clarify a bit of confusion in last week's article about the College for Lifelong Learning's project at Sunday River. Some of the comments gave the impression that this was the only, even the first, opportunity for postsecondary education in the area. In fact, since 1989, the University of Maine system has offered college courses at Telstar using the faculty of all seven campuses and several technical colleges.

This nationally recognized distance-learning initiative currently brings more than 150 courses to residents of our area each semester either through interactive television or via the Internet. The inclusion of Telstar as one of the first ITV sites resulted from diligent efforts by an energetic local task force which realized the need for postsecondary education in the area and kept the pressure on the University to make sure we were in the first round of sites.

Degree programs available entirely over the system include associate's degrees in Applied Science for Educational Technicians, Law Enforcement Technology, Liberal Arts, Social Services, Business Administration, Financial Services, Liberal Studies, and Library and Information Technology. Bachelor's degrees are available in Behavioral Science, Business Administration, Library and Information Technology, Mental Health and Human Services, and University Studies.

Master's degrees are available in Liberal Studies, Health Policy and Management, and Library and Information Science.

Many students enrolled in on-campus degree programs frequently take advantage of ITV and Internet courses to supplement their programs. Students who are primarily participating in college through distance learning are able to vary their experience by attending on-site classes at the University of Maine's Rumford/Mexico Center or at Oxford Hills High School. The cost for ITV and Internet classes is between $103 and $132 per credit hour with the cost for the usual three-credit course running between $300 and $400.

Financial aid is available for students enrolled in degree programs taking a minimum of two courses per semester. During the past 12 years more than 400 individuals have participated in post-secondary programs at the Telstar High School site. Several of the recently hired teachers in SAD44 completed their college work through ITV. New Telstar graduates each year use ITV to transition to an on-campus experience.

Charlene Cash, a corrections officer at the Oxford County Jail recently honored as Employee of the Month, completed the majority of her associate's degree in Mental Health and Human Services right here at Telstar. They are just a few of the folks who make up our pool of students.

The University recently began a program to encourage adults to try college for the first time. Lin Chapman is the first Osher Scholar at the Telstar site. Her first college class — College Writing — is entirely paid for, including books, by the University. Lin has worked "since the beginning" at the Telstar site encouraging our ITV students every step of the way. We are thrilled that it is now her turn.

Applications for Osher scholarships for spring semester are now being accepted — anyone interested should call the office, 824-2780.

I am delighted to see the expansion of postsecondary opportunities for adults with the advent of the Sunday River program and the USM and CMTC courses at Oxford Hills. However, the past 12 years of service afforded to more than 400 individuals right here at Telstar and the ongoing commitment of the University of Maine System to providing distance learning at nearly 100 locations statewide, including most high schools and several large businesses, should not be overlooked in the effort to publicize new developments.

MUSIC DIRECTOR SOUGHT

To the Editor:

The Mahoosuc Music Makers is searching for a new director. After many years of devoted service, Jonathan Smith recently informed the band he will not be able to continue as band director. Jonathan will be sorely missed, as his work helped to bring the Mahoosuc Music Makers to fruition, which has been performing for six years.

The band is now searching for a new director. People interested in this role, or interested in just wanting to play some music (don't worry about musical ability), are invited to join "our small group of interested musicians for fun and enjoyment of playing diversified music." An open house will take place at the West Parish Congregational Church on Oct. 16 at 7 p.m. where interested musicians can talk with band members. (The band practices every Monday evening at the church from 7 to 8:30 p.m.)

The Mahoosuc Music Makers is about to begin a new season and has an exciting Christmas Concert scheduled on Dec. 10, which will include their new brass quintet. The band has also purchased many new pieces.

For additional information, contact me at 824-8684, or e-mail trumpets3u@yahoo.com.

AGREES ON ALBANY

To the Editor:

In reference to the Oct. 5 letter from Pam Chodosh, I wish to agree with her completely as to the importance of this meeting and urge all interested parties to attend. We are considering a major step in the future of Albany Township, which should be given a great deal of thought.

At the first meeting, many problems were discussed, and I feel certain that we have very capable people in Albany that can handle the problems as they come up.

Though there are a great many uncertainties about our decision, the only thing that my wife and I feel absolutely certain about is that we do not want high-stakes gambling in Albany, and we are ready to do whatever may be necessary to avoid it, and hope that the majority feel the same.

MEETING ON A VITAL ISSUE

To the Editor:

To be, or not to be? We are at a time in the history of our township that this question can no longer be avoided. The world is changing and apparently not going to let Albany Township remain unaffected.

How do we preserve as much of what we have grown to love about this beautiful part of our state is what we now all must decide and take part in.

Please join friends and neighbors in what may be our last informational meeting on this vital issue, Sunday, Oct. 15 at 3 p.m. at Albany Community Hall (the old Grange Hall).

Mt. Abram

RECOVERING—Randy Dunican, owner of Mt. Abram Ski area, said the mountain will be opening the week before Christmas, as usual. tion board to members, it was suggested that the Dunicans might not be able to open the mountain this winter. The letter also implied the possibility of another foreclosure sale, perhaps as early as November. These possibilities were, the letter stated, based on conversations with "representatives of the mountain's mortgage holder."

Association members were asked to attend to "discuss the situation and what we can do to help and perhaps how we might organize a new entity to purchase the mountain."

Attorney William Kany Jr., the Chalet Association's treasurer, said that he did have conversations with the mortgage holder's attorneys about these possibilities. Kany said that the lender's attorneys did not disclose the financial situation of the mountain in the course of those conversations.

"Our hope and desire," Kany said, "is that we open and that we have a good season."

Concerned neighbors

Many of the people that attended the meeting are longtime fans of the mountain. They feel that they have been left in a lurch twice before as ownership of the mountain changed.

That feeling is reflected in the letter sent out by the Chalet Association board. "While we have no idea what will happen," the letter stated, "we need to be prepared to act to protect our mountain, our investments, and as important, our sense of family and community we have all come to love and perhaps take for granted."

Dick Lane, a member of the Mt. Abram Condo Association (not to be confused with the Chalet Association) said, "Nobody knew what the situation was. People were more curious than anything else. They just wanted to know what was going on."

What's going on?

The Dunicans found out about the meeting just after Randy got out of the hospital. "I felt like I'd been kicked just when I was down," Randy said. They attended the meeting, held last Sunday afternoon. "People were surprised to see me walk in."

According to the Dunicans, their mortgage is paid through January 2001. They claim that the letter sent out by the Chalet Association was not factual. They said that they were not contacted by any member of the Chalet Association's board until four days prior to the meeting — well after the letter had been widely circulated.

The Dunicans, in a response read at the meeting, also expressed their concern at the tone of the letter, stating it "is vindictive and most likely catastrophic to our business, its future, its good will, and its intrinsic value."

They also objected to Kany's actions contacting their mortgage holder and said they are considering legal action.

Another officer of the Chalet Association board, contacted by The Citizen, had no comment.

Dunican said, "I have been contacted by board members about this. They said they knew nothing about the letter. They never discussed it. The first they heard about it was when it appeared in their mailboxes. The ones that I talked to apologized."

Preparations for opening day

The Dunicans admit that their preoccupation with other things, and the lack of communication that resulted, helped cause the current situation.

"Part of the problem," Dunican said, "is that we haven't put season tickets on sale yet. Mt. Abram is a family mountain, and we want to make sure that families with two or more kids can afford to ski here."

He said that the chief financial officer, Brian Maloney, is analyzing the best price that they can offer for tickets.

"We want to be the lowest priced mountain in Maine," Dunican said. "As soon as we've determined what the price will be, we'll make an announcement and put season tickets on sale."

Snowmaking, ski school plans on schedule

By REBECCA ZICARELLI

Brian Dunham, mountain manager at Mt. Abram, said things on the ground are ready to go. "Right now, if we had to make snow next week, we could, we're that close. We're ahead of last year's schedule by at least a month or more, and things are in better shape."

Dunham said he is currently finishing work on the chairlifts. He has also installed additional hydrants in an effort that will make the snowmaking equipment more efficient. The trails have also been mowed, with the exception of some edges and steeper parts that need to be done by hand.

New programs

Kristen Rollins, director of the Mt. Abram Adventure School, has plans well underway for the winter season, also. Rollins has a meeting scheduled for ski instructors at the end of the month to discuss those plans.

One of the biggest changes will be in the availability of lessons for Level I and II skiers. In previous years, the lessons were only available every two hours. This year, Rollins plans to switch to station-based instruction, at least for the busy weekends.

In station-based instruction, different skills are taught at stations every half hour. At the first station, a new skier or snowboarder learns about the equipment. At station two, they learn about wedges and turns. A student progresses up through the stations at his or her own rate, without having to wait for the scheduled lessons.

"This method works well if you have lots of people taking lessons, and you want to get them going and out on the hill," Rollins said.

Rollins is also planning a three-year snowsport apprenticeship program. Kids from 14 to 16 years old will be able to take instructor training in alpine skiing, telemark skiing, and snowboarding.

Rollins attended the meeting held last week by the Chalet Association. "Mostly," he said, "people are concerned because they haven't heard anything. I want them to know that Mt. Abram is ready to go."

FALSE ALARM—Fire departments from Newry, Bethel and Greenwood responded Sunday night to a report of a possible electrical fire at the Jordan Grand Hotel in Newry. It was found that a smoke alarm had malfunctioned, and there was no smoke or fire, according to Chip Seamans, Sunday River managing director. Guests were moved to other lodging at the resort for the night. "We were very pleased with the response of the three fire companies," Seamans said. (Photo by Alison Aloisio)

Bethel mil rap up

BETHEL—The Board of Assessors Tuesday set Bethel's mil rate at $16.45 per thousand, up $2.30 from last year, according to Christen Mason, town clerk. The hike was a result of increases in the municipal, school and county budgets. Tax bills are expected to go out Friday.

Aylward injured in moose attack

MASON TOWNSHIP—An attack by a bull moose last Wednesday night put Don Aylward of Mason in the hospital with a puncture in his side and abrasions and bruises. Aylward, 56, went outside to investigate why his dog was barking, according to game warden Norm Lewis. Aylward met the dog running past him back toward the house, with the moose in pursuit. The moose ran over Aylward, knocking him over then continued to hit him. He escaped over a banking, where he waited for the moose to leave. Aylward then got back to his house under his own power. He was taken to Stephens Memorial Hospital in Norway by Bethel Rescue. It is currently mating season for moose, making them more aggressive, Lewis said.

Solid waste plan takes shape

BETHEL—The towns of Bethel, Newry and Hanover are preparing to issue a request for proposals to set up a joint transfer station and recycling center for the towns. The station would be located on the site of the current Bethel transfer station. The towns would seek proposals for two possible scenarios: a station from which a contractor hauls solid waste brought in by individuals or by the contractor under agreement with any individual household (optional curbside pickup); or a comprehensive curbside pickup of both solid waste and recyclables. Under the second scenario, a consolidated transfer station open to the public would also continue to accept solid waste. Other categories of waste, such as construction debris, would be hauled from the station under either scenario. The towns expect to execute a contract with the winning bidder no later than Dec. 1. The transfer station would be administered under an interlocal agreement, through a board comprised of two members from each town. Selectmen would also have to endorse decisions made by the board. The RFP will be discussed by the Bethel Board of Selectmen Oct. 16.

County budget hearing tonight

PARIS—A public hearing is scheduled for tonight (Thursday) on a proposed Oxford County budget 14.5 percent higher than last year. The hearing will take place at 6 p.m. in the county commissioners' chambers. Twelve percent of the increase is due to a 32 percent jump in group insurance costs. The insurance hike is the largest in at least five years, according to Carole Mahoney, county administrative assistant. The $2.76 million budget also includes a 12 percent pay increase for dispatchers, to bring them to a comparable level with surrounding dispatch centers.

Woodstock company gets award

WOODSTOCK—Inman Printing/Scentsations, owned by Jeff and Heidi Inman, is the winner of the first Excellence in Mailing Award from the Mid-Maine Postal Customer Council. The award is presented to a central Maine business that has partnered with the U.S. Postal Service to improve business. The award was established to honor success stories in business mail. It recognizes both creativity and initiative in meeting business objectives through use of Postal service products and services. The Inmans produce candles, which are delivered to customers throughout the U.S. using Priority Mail. The company, now on the Internet, uses Priority Mail to cut shipping costs, according to the Inmans.

All proceeds will aid the boosters' track & field community project fund in its effort to construct a track and field complex at Telstar Regional High School. The second annual Italian buffet dinner will be held from 5:30 to 8 p.m. in the Grand Ballroom of the hotel. The dinner, donated by the resort, is a full complement of dishes including pastas, sauces, salad, rolls and dessert. MAC phonathon next week

BETHEL—The annual Phonathon for the Mahoos Arts Council will take place on the evenings of Oct. 17, 18, and 19. The phonathon is MAC's major fundraising event, and has a goal for this year of $7,500. Volunteers will be calling individuals to ask for gifts that will help bring performances to the SAD44 schools and communities. The number of community performances sponsored by the Arts Council will increase this year from nine to 20, with an increase in spending from $14,000 to $24,000. There will be 18 in-school performances.

Adelphia hearing scheduled

WOODSTOCK—A public hearing regarding Adelphia Communications cable TV service will take place at 7 p.m. Oct. 16. The hearing is open to residents of Woodstock and surrounding towns. Like other towns, Woodstock is in the process of renewing its cable contract.

Skull found at septic site

LOVELL—A skull found at a construction site off a private road has been found to be centuries old. The skull was found about three to five feet below the surface during a septic project, according to state officials. An archaeologist with the University of Maine determined the skull to be several hundred years old.

WMNF exemption dropped

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Sen. Judd Gregg's (R-N.H.) attempt to exempt the White Mountain National Forest from President Clinton's roadless-forests plan ended recently when Gregg's proposal was dropped to avoid a veto of the Interior Appropriations Bill. Clinton had indicated he would veto the bill if the exemption was included. Under Clinton's plan, roads could not be built on national forest land in areas currently without roads. There are approximately 324,000 acres of roadless areas in the 780,000 WMNF.

From the Bethel Police Log:

Rest stop was hardly restful

At 4:06 p.m. on Oct. 7 police were dispatched to the Route 2 rest area for a report of people fighting with a tire iron. When the officer arrived with a county officer, two people were standing outside a car parked in the throughway. They said there was an argument between two subjects. One smelled of an intoxicating liquor. The other advised the first subject was on probation. A check with the probation officer revealed alcohol conditions for the probation. The subject gave an incorrect date of birth, and was belligerent. The probation officer authorized a probation hold. Joan Wasson, 50, was arrested for disorderly conduct, failure to give correct name, address and date of birth, as well as the probation hold. When a county officer tried to give her an intoxicity test, she became uncooperative and was taken to the Oxford County Jail. She was also summoned for unlawful possession for schedule drugs, after it was found she only had a prescription for only one kind of five schedule drugs in one bottle.

Wednesday, Oct. 4

At 8 a.m. a caller reported a truck had lost a trailer on the Androscoggin River bridge, causing a hay bailer to strike the guardrail. At 9 a.m. the operator of the truck reported to police the trailer had jumped the trailer ball and the safety chain had snapped. He said there was no real damage to the trailer or his equipment. Police planned to contact MDOT to see if any action needed to be taken regarding damage to the guardrail.

At 6:25 p.m. police received information regarding a subject making a dangerous pass on Route 26. The officer stopped the vehicle on Main Street. A license check showed a suspended status for failing to appear. Pierre Pepin, 50, of D'Orford, Quebec, was taken to the Oxford County Jail and charged with improper passing and operating after suspension.

At 10 p.m. police received information that a subject had two outstanding warrants for failure to appear. Police located him at his residence. Tony J. Merrill, 19, of Bethel was taken into custody and taken to the Oxford County Jail. He was also out on bail, with conditions of no possession or use of alcohol. Police detected an odor of liquor, and a breath test was administered. He was also charged with violation of conditions of release.

Friday, Oct. 6

At 8:16 p.m. police received a report that a subject was involved in a verbal altercation on Vernon Street. Further investigation revealed a warrant for failure to appear on Armand A. Bolduc, Sr. of Oxford. He was arrested and taken to the Oxford County Jail.

Saturday, Oct. 7

At 10 a.m. police were informed by a complainant that a subject had hit the vehicle she was driving at the Irving Station on Route 2. The front left signal lens was broken. She said the subject said there was no reason to call police. He gave her his information and said he was going to a craft show at Sunday River if more information was needed. Police located the subject's vehicle, which had no apparent damage. The subject admitted he hit the other car, and said he did not think it needed to be reported. The officer gave Thomas Heikkinen, 47, a summons for failure to report a vehicle damage accident.

At 2:45 p.m. police clocked a vehicle doing 76 mph in a 45 mph zone on Route 5. The officer issued a summons to the driver (no name given) for exceeding the speed limit by 30 mph or more.

Sunday, Oct. 8

At 7:02 p.m. police were asked to assist Newry and Bethel fire departments at a hotel in Newry with a report of an electrical fire.

Monday, Oct. 9

At 6:01 p.m. police arrested Aaron Brazell, 24, of Woodbine, Md. on Route 2 for criminal speed (80-plus mph in a 45 mph zone) and failure to stop for a police officer. He was taken to the Oxford County Jail, where he was held in lieu of bail.

lamp," he said. They also figured out how to keep their water usage to an absolute minimum through recycling it.

As they read more and more about conservation, he said, "I really wanted to live somewhere where I would heat with firewood. I had this crazy thing to cut my own wood."

They decided then to move to Maine. "I wanted to live in the woods. I had these youthful fantasies about what life was going to be like," he said.

So in 1984, the couple and their young son, Ashley, moved to Woodstock. They lived in a tent while they built a small cabin on the Cushman Hill Road. It had no running water or electricity. Adapting to the rigors of winter kept Bies from hiking for a while.

A couple of years later, Bies and his wife were divorced. He continued to live in the small cabin equipped only with a phone. And he got back into hiking.

"I did a couple of daytrips a year," he said.

The idea to hike all the WMNF trails came to him while he was in the Carter Range. "I hadn't seen a map of the entire forest," he said. "I didn't have a clear concept of how big a project it was."

He would have the advantage of a hiker-friendly work schedule. Bies is a part-time math instructor in the University of Maine system.

The "Winnif-Wide Web"

He had the idea of connecting with his footsteps all the trails he would hike. Looking at the forest map, he decided, "I would connect all these dotted lines onto one network — my personal spatial Internet (the Winnif-Wide Web, he calls it, pronouncing WMNF as Winnif)."

Bies decided he would bush-whack his way between some of the trails to make that connection, rather than going by roadway.

"In the beginning I did a couple of big backpacking trips," he said, reasoning day hikes could cover a lot of the territory in between.

He spent a lot of time poring over his forest map, trying to figure out the most efficient way to reach his goal. Some days he drove 200 miles and hiked 17 miles.

Most of his hikes were solitary. They were not without adventure, however.

On one overnight hike, for example, Bies spent the night in a three-sided shelter. He hung his food from a tree to avoid problems with bears — or so he thought.

In the morning, as he was putting his food in his pack, he saw a bear coming across the stream at him. It was not a huge animal, maybe about 200 pounds, he thought.

"But he knew how to intimidate a hiker," said Bies. The bear slowly swaggered up to him. "He gave me time to think about it," he said.

The bruin then stuck his head inside Bies' food pack. Bies took his walking stick and hit the bear over the head.

The bear was not impressed. It threateningly grabbed a small spruce tree nearby, as if, said Bies, demonstrating what it could do to the human if it wanted.

"It was very effective," said Bies. The bear returned to the food pack.

"Then I did my second stupid thing," Bies said. He grabbed the pack, with the intent of dumping out the food and at least saving the pack.

"(The bear) chased me 'til it realized I was dumping it. Then it grabbed the tastiest food and ran. We compromised."

Bies hiked the next four miles without stopping. "I was imagining it was pursuing me," he said.

Nearly as frightening was the "midnight quarrel about bedding space with a Pilot Range moose."

That night, he said, "I had no tent. I had laid down (in a sleeping bag) in a depression in a meadow. Sometime in the middle of the night, 'when it was far too dark to see,' he said, a moose showed up.

"It stomped and woofed, like 'get out of my bed,' he said. 'I spoke to it, and it stomped and woofed and finally left. I didn't get any more sleep that night.'"

Encounters with humans were generally less eventful. There was, however, one aggressive hiker "who challenged me about how far I had hiked," said Bies. "I told him a thousand miles (thinking that was impressive), but he said he'd hiked 20,000."

There were occasions when Bies had companions by design. As Ashley got older, he accompanied his father over a total of about 200 miles. Other hikers accounted for about a hundred miles.

Bies generally had good hiking weather (picking it that way most of the time). The snowy hike over Mt. Adams and the downpour on Bondcliff were exceptions, he said.

Despite the encounters with wildlife and some inclement weather, Bies sustained only one serious injury, in 1997.

"I was on a day hike on the Guinea Pond Trail. It was a very cold (15 degrees) October morning. I took a fall in a brook, when I was rock-hopping. It knocked the breath out of me," he said.

On getting to his feet, he realized he'd broken some ribs. "It was a little over two miles to walk out," he said, "but it wasn't as hard as you'd think. I had to keep moving (because of being wet and cold)." Bies made it to his car — and then drove all the way home. A friend gave him a ride to Stephens Memorial Hospital.

As Bies got closer to completing his hikes, "I got caught up in the compulsion of it sometimes, and I'd go a few miles farther than was comfortable," he said.

He stuck with his plan to bush-whack between trails. "Tying all mapped routes into one true WWW, to include my home on Bryant Pond, Maine, as the easternmost node, could be done by road-walking — but what solitude was to be found that way?" Bies later wrote in his essay. "I chose instead the aloneness of blank, map-and-compass-accessible spaces between trails, and found a hard-earned satisfaction."

The place to end it

At one point during the last two years, Bies and Ashley were hiking on a trail that gave them a view of 4,000-foot Mt. Osceola. "I'm going to end it there," he told Ashley.

On Sept. 11 of last year, Ashley hiked with him on the Mt. Osceola trail. When they came to the intersection with another trail, signifying the completion of his trail "web," Ashley drew a line down the center of the intersecting trail.

"I hopped over it, and it was complete," said Bies. "I vaulted over it with my walking stick, and Ashley cheered."

Did he feel any different at that moment?

"No," said Bies. He went home and told a few fellow-hikers.

He later contacted the Appalachian Mountain Club to learn if anyone else shared his accomplishment. One did — a park ranger who did a lot of hiking in his free time.

Bies' neighbor, Marcel Polak, works for the AMC. After Polak spoke well of Bies' writing skills, the club asked Bies to write an essay about his experience.

He pounded one out on his manual typewriter, and it's been back and forth to AMC several times for revision. It is scheduled for publication in November.

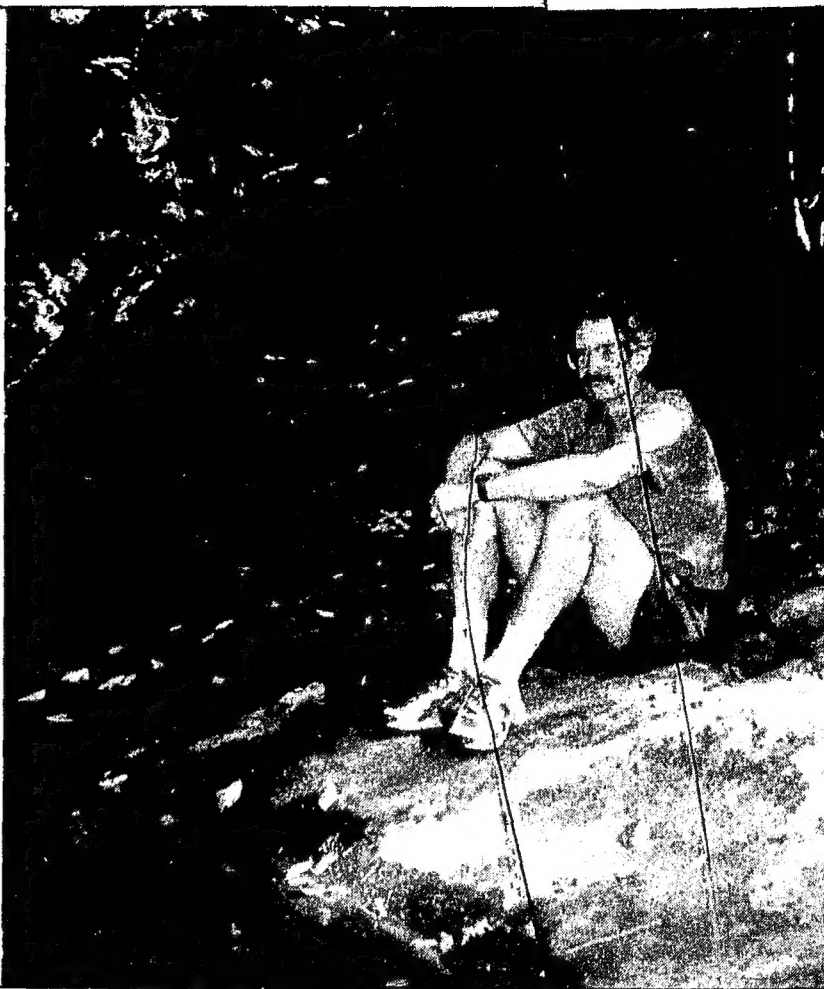

Since last fall, Bies has continued to hike — but not nearly at the pace he did in the previous seven years. He has no plans to take on any other major hiking challenges.

Can Bies put his finger on exactly what it is that kept drawing him back to the woods trails in pursuit of his "Winnif" goal?

Some of it was ego, some of it was obsession, he said. Mostly, though, "It's the way the light comes through the trees in the forest. I'm continually thrilled by that. I feel really glad to be there."

CLOSE TO NATURE
Steve Bies' essay on his hiking odyssey in the White Mountain National Forest is scheduled to appear in an upcoming issue of "AMC Outdoors" magazine. He is shown here next to a brook near his Woodstock home.

Economic study

Visitation Program, Zinchuk said.

In that exercise the chamber and the Maine Department of Labor interviewed 85 local businesses, in order to generate hands-on information on the local economic climate.

By contrast, the SAD44 economic study is based on an analysis of information generated by state and federal agencies, including the U.S. Census Bureau.

The task was made difficult, Zinchuk said, by the fact that in state and federal analyses Bethel area statistics are usually lumped with those of Oxford County, Rumford or the Norway/South Paris areas.

"But the micro-economy of the SAD44 area is distinct," Zinchuk said, so all that information had to be reagggregated if it was to be a useful tool for local decision making.

"It was a real process to get some of this information," she said.

The Oct. 23 economic summit is free and open to the public (but reservations are necessary and may be made through the chamber).

The day's activities will include a welcoming address by Dana Conors, president of the Maine State Chamber of Commerce; presentations on the two reports; and breakout sessions entitled "Visioning ... where do we want to be in five years," and "Establishing priorities."

In addition to providing input for the economic summit, Zinchuk said, the Economic Study is also expected to be a useful tool for businesses looking to locate in the Bethel area, or for existing businesses considering expansion here.

Copies of the report will be available from the chamber (824-2282).

The helicopter took Nealle-May to Stephens Memorial Hospital, where she was pronounced dead on arrival.

An autopsy report said she died of natural causes from a berry aneurysm, which is located at the point where an artery branches into two arteries. It is unlikely a collision would have caused the rupture, according to medical authorities. Such an aneurysm can rupture at any time.

There was no evidence of trauma on the body, the medical examiner said. The Gould player was not injured. Gould headmaster Bill Clough said Tuesday it could not necessarily be concluded that a collision had occurred. Eyewitness accounts varied, he said.

The game was described by Clough as a friendly one. Nealle-May's parents, Donovan and Candice Nealle-May, visited Gould Friday, and met with Clough.

Clough said the parents were complimentary of the efforts by Gould staff and students in administering first aid to their daughter.

Gould students are also making personal contributions to a scholarship fund that has been established at the New Hampton School in Nealle-May's memory, he said.

Following the death, the Revs. Brendan and Jean Bass provided counseling for Gould team members and other students.

ready to open at the end of the year, she said. A terraced area is planned for the front of the building, with plantings of grass and Japanese maple trees. Three parking spaces would be provided at the rear of the building, facing the building.

John Shorb, whose property abuts the proposed market at the rear, wrote the board that he does not oppose the plans. He said he is confident they will be implemented in a responsible way, "providing a useful community service and dramatically improving the appearance of a building that has been an eyesore for years."

He did, however, note concerns about parking, lighting, green space and trash and snow removal as they might impact his property. He said he had received assurance from DiCocco his concerns would be considered.

My summer friend, the hummingbird, has left until another year. I miss him. They arrive in Maine in time for the daffodils after making migration from the far north to their wintering grounds in Southern Mexico and Central America. Some of the hummers make a nonstop 500-mile flight across the Gulf of Mexico.

When reading about them, I learned that there are 300 different kinds. They are remarkable creatures both in how they make a living and how they feed. Flowers that attract them are trumpet shaped, rich in nectar, annual or perennial, and the color of red really presses their buttons. They also visit flowers not trumpet shaped. I learned that they also eat small insects. Flowers that they like are petunias, fuchsias, nasturtiums, tiger lilies, coral bells and others. Watchers find them an endless delight.

Andover

I love this time of year, not because of the pretty leaves, although they are nice, not because of the orange pumpkins, or the fairs, no, not because of any of these things. I love it because now, for a few wonderful days, you can kill a mouse, if you have a permit that is, and I wish everyone had at least two. Yes, it's open season on the biggest killers and car wreckers in the state of Maine. I just came by Andover General Store, and Eric and/or Arthur Hutchins had just gotten a huge one. It must weigh almost a thousand pounds and its rack is big enough to hang at least 20 coats and/or hats on. Congratulations, guys. Enough of that; I know that a lot of people won't agree with this, but, frankly, I don't give a hoot.

There will be a fundraiser for the Andover Elementary School library on Sunday, Oct. 29. It will be held at the Sunday River Brewing Company from 3 to 5 p.m. There will be a pumpkin carving contest, best costume, apple bobbing, and face painting. It sounds like a lot of fun and is for a worthy cause.

The Andover Elementary School wants to thank Anne Marie and Joe Mahar for their generous gift of a microscope that can be connected to the computer. Gee, I wish I had one of them.

Olympic-quality soccer was played by the Andover Eagles recently. They won their second game of the season with an impressive 15-0 victory. Brianna Bailey scored four goals, Degan Conrad and Nicole Hughes each got a hat trick, Kayla Damon scored twice, and Mark Emerson, Arete Maselli and Matt Farrington each scored a goal apiece. All I can say is, "wow, way to go team."

Marge Towne of East Andover is visiting Switzerland, probably checking out the trails.

I had an experience on Saturday that I would like to share with you. Now I will be the first to admit that I am an awful housekeeper. I hate to clean, vacuum, wash windows, and all that fun stuff. To me, it's just a waste of time, because before you know it you have to do it all over again. I'll cook anything you want if you'll do my housecleaning. My sister, Donna, is the manager of an inn near Fryeburg, and last weekend, what with the fair and all she was right out straight. I offered to go and help with the wash. It was understood that I wouldn't be expected to clean anything except the towels, sheets and so on.

Here comes my problem — how in the name of God do you fold a fitted sheet, especially about a hundred of them? Towels, washcloths, pillowcases, flat sheets, all that went fine, but I guess I never realized before now that there is an art to folding fitted sheets equal to that of folding paper stuff they do in Japan. And guess what, everyone has their own special way of doing it, and no two ways are alike. My way was to just fold the thing into as little bundle as possible. I mean it's worked for me for years, but no, it seems that I've been doing it wrong. There were five women working there this weekend and, guess what, I now know five different ways to fold a fitted sheet. Sometimes the excitement in my life just gets almost too hard to take.

The word of the week is compeer. Look it up. See ya.

Hanover

The "Blessing of the River" was Sunday, Oct. 1. It had originally been scheduled for Sunday, Sept.

24, but the weather that day was bad. A group of participants traveled by canoe and boat from the Hanover Ferry Boat Landing downstream in the Androscoggin River to the John Martin Bridge at Rumford Point.

The group joined others, who had arrived by other means of transportation at a 2:15 p.m. special service at the Rumford Point Congregational Church. Featured was a presentation by Sarah Wight of Hanover, who spoke about Native American folklore and mythology. Others participating were Steve Wight, Norman Ferguson Jr., Gail Parent, Dorothy Dunton, and the Rev. Deborah Jenks. Organist was Lynn Ramsey.

History of the Rumford area was traced from Jonathan Keyes, who was the first settler at Rumford Corner, to the development of the paper mills and the resulting pollution of the Androscoggin River. It was shown that the river is now much cleaner due in part to efforts of Senator Ed Muskie. The river was described as having a spirituality that relates to religion.

Following the inside service, the congregation marched onto the John Martin Bridge and the Rev. Deborah Jenks blessed the river, then dried flowers and cracked corn were tossed into the water as a token of gratitude for the close association of the community and the river. The event was well attended, and it is hoped that it will become an annual activity. Chairperson for the activities was Dorothy Dunton.

The cooler nights and colored leaves have brought about the exodus of the "snowbirds." Those older folks have begun their semi-annual trip across the country to warmer places. Among the first to leave were John and Louise Morton.

The Knights of Pythias annual event, "Hands Across the Border," took place Sept. 28 and 29 at Calais and St. Stephen, New Brunswick, Canada. The Americans and the Canadians met at the National Boundary on a bridge over the St. Croix River. Meetings, a supper, and entertainment were enjoyed by everyone. Part of the entertainment was provided by Dorothy Canwell of Norway. Others from this area who attended were Lillian and Craig Turner, Donna and Clem Worcester from Hanover, and Joyce and Danny Bennett from Milton. A featured guest was Joyce Howe Wright ad her husband, Ed, of Manchester, N.H. Joyce was the daughter of John and Stella Howe and grew up in the Ellis River Valley. She is presently supreme chief of the Pythian Sisters.

The Hanover town office will be closed on Friday, Oct. 13. This is due to a Bureau of Motor Vehicles' meeting and has nothing at all to do with Friday, the 13th. The office should return to its regular schedule next week.

How many of you out there wake up doing math problems in your head?

That's what I was doing one morning last week. Now if I make this much per year, divided by this many hours per year, how much does that make per week — or something like that. Am I worrying obsessively about money? No, not me. In any case, that is how my day began last week. It had nowhere to go but up.

When I came home one night last week, the turkey, (we have to give him a name) was just standing looking at the schoolhouse. Perhaps he was a student there in a previous life. Does that mean he was a bad student and came back as a turkey or a good student with fond memories of his old school? In any case, there he was. He remained in the general vicinity for quite some time. He does that when he isn't strutting down the bike lane like he owned it. Of course, he's still stopping traffic. Now we have the leaf peepers who stop to take his picture. That would be fine, but they are not quite pulling off the road, and I saw more than one near collision Sunday. Another reason to not drive fast on this road. I only hope someone doesn't shoot this guy during turkey season. He's become too much of a neighborhood pet and these people are his friends.

Two weekends ago I attended the supper and forum in support of Question 6. That is the anti-discrimination question mentioned before in this column. It protects us all, not just gay men and lesbians. If anyone is suspected of being gay, they can legally be fired from their job, currently. No proof or confirmation is needed. This law would protect us all. It also begins work begun years ago to end discrimination against those we somehow deem different from us and protects us at the same time. I recommend a yes vote.

The end of September, several friends and I went to the Common Ground Fair. It is a yearly trek for me, and well worth the trip. There are animals, large and small, good food and junk food, music, dancing and crafts. There is also an excellent children's area for the young and young at heart. The kids even had their own contra dance. There was also one for adults. That was my downfall. For me, it is also a time to renew friendships. Some people I only see at the fair and others I see at other times. We all had a good time and left just as it was drizzling. Last week I tried for the Fryeburg Fair, but every time I got ready to go it started to rain. I should have gone Saturday, but no, I had to do something else.

I am still looking for a roommate, if anyone has any ideas. I would like someone for the cold weather times. That way there would be two of us making sure the home fire is burning. Would like a non-smoking woman. Tasha and I are fairly easy to live with, I think, and don't make much noise. The wood is almost all in, too. Probably will be by the time you are read this.

The horses have been full of spunk lately, running in the field and having a general good time. I guess they like the weather we're having. They even frolic in the rain.

For the first time in all the years I've lived here, I met the Limings. Or rather my social secretary went running up to them to say hello and meet them. They say that curiosity killed the cat, but it seems to work for us. Dogs are always great for meeting people. Children are, too, but I have Tasha.

I was shocked and very saddened, when I opened the Citizen and learned of the sudden death of Phyllis Dock. She was a very special woman and a poet, too. That is how I came to know her. I am sorry I didn't know in time to go to help service, but my thoughts are definitely with her family. We have all lost a very special woman.

I came home the other day to find the following on my door. It is from Julie Daye. A 39th birthday party was held Sept. 30 for Brad Harrington. Eighteen family members and friends attended.

Reilly and Marty Reynolds daughter, Sandy and her husband Vic, of California, recently visited with niece Julie Daye and husband Ed. They hadn't seen each other in many years. It was a great surprise for Julie.

This evening (Sunday) the quiet was broken by sirens as ambulances and at least three fire engines rushed by. I expect I'll find out tomorrow what happened. I hope it was nothing more serious than a chimney fire.

That's all for this week. Tomorrow is a day off for many so we can celebrate the legacy of rape, murder and pillage of Native Americans. I think we should call that holiday and have Native American Appreciation Day, instead. After all, they helped us survive in this land. Besides, they were here first, so Columbus couldn't have discovered it because it was already inhabited. In any case, have a good day off, you are off, and have a good week. Enjoy the foliage.

Mona and I returned from nearly a month on the road at about 2 a.m. Sept. 30, having covered nearly 9,200 miles in that time. The trip took us from coast to coast and from Canada to New Mexico. Our little Toyota pickup never skipped a beat the entire trip.

When we got home, I found that Brother Rupert had taken better care of our animals than I do, when

The Way I See It

by Sharon Bouchard

Sharon Bouchard's column is published here by special arrangement with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.

Wouldn't you just know it! I finally find the greatest bit of garment industry ingenuity in the form of s-t-r-e-t-c-h pants and now they seem to be out of style. Actually, they were in style a long time ago when I was in my teens. My best friends, Sandy and Ruthie and I all had a pair of skin tight, very shiny bright (I'm talking put your sunglasses on bright) yellow s-t-r-e-t-c-h-y pants. We also had matching sweaters. Remember when teenage girls dressed alike?

any ankles. And when it looks like your shins start at your shoelaces you look even shorter than you are and that's not good.

I almost gave up, but then I discovered that label with the magic word, "petite!" Isn't that a great word? No matter how fat one may be they can still be petite and that sounds so darn small. It's great! I'm darn near as wide as I am tall, but I have to wear pants that are petite. It's a wonderful world.

mean they really, really s-t-r-e-t-c-h-e-d. No feet in the head. My body didn't get propelled across the room or anything like that. I couldn't believe it.

And when I stood up, it was perfect. No thigh wrinkles. No sag, no bag. I didn't even have to pull my pant legs down or readjust any material anywhere. It was a gosh darn miracle.

To some of you, especially men, this may all seem a bit trite, but for those of us who go through pulling, picking and tugging every time we sit down or stand up, there is nothing trite about it.

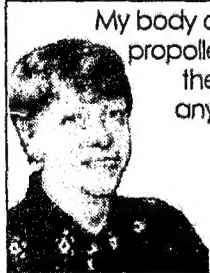

I think men would benefit a great deal by wearing s-t-r-e-t-c-h pants. Don't think women haven't noticed you guys shaking your legs trying to get your pant legs to fall where they belong. For that matter, we've seen you picking your seat and I'm not talking about at the movies. And there are quite a few men walking around who could use the illusion of looking 10 pounds thinner.

Yes indeed, s-t-r-e-t-c-h pants are great and I don't care if they are in style or not. I never thought I'd see the day when a clothing style of my teens would be so important to me in my middle age.

I hear the fashion industry has even seen fit to resurrect bell-bottoms. Maybe I'll give them a try too. I hope they never bring back the hip-huggers though because the way I see it any material that would hug my hips would be one heck of a s-t-r-e-t-c-h!

What a trio we must have made walking up the street in our day-glow outfits, teased bouffant hairdos sprayed with a half can of hair spray and decorated with clip-on velvet yellow bows. We really thought we were uptown girls.

My body didn't get propelled across the room or anything like that.

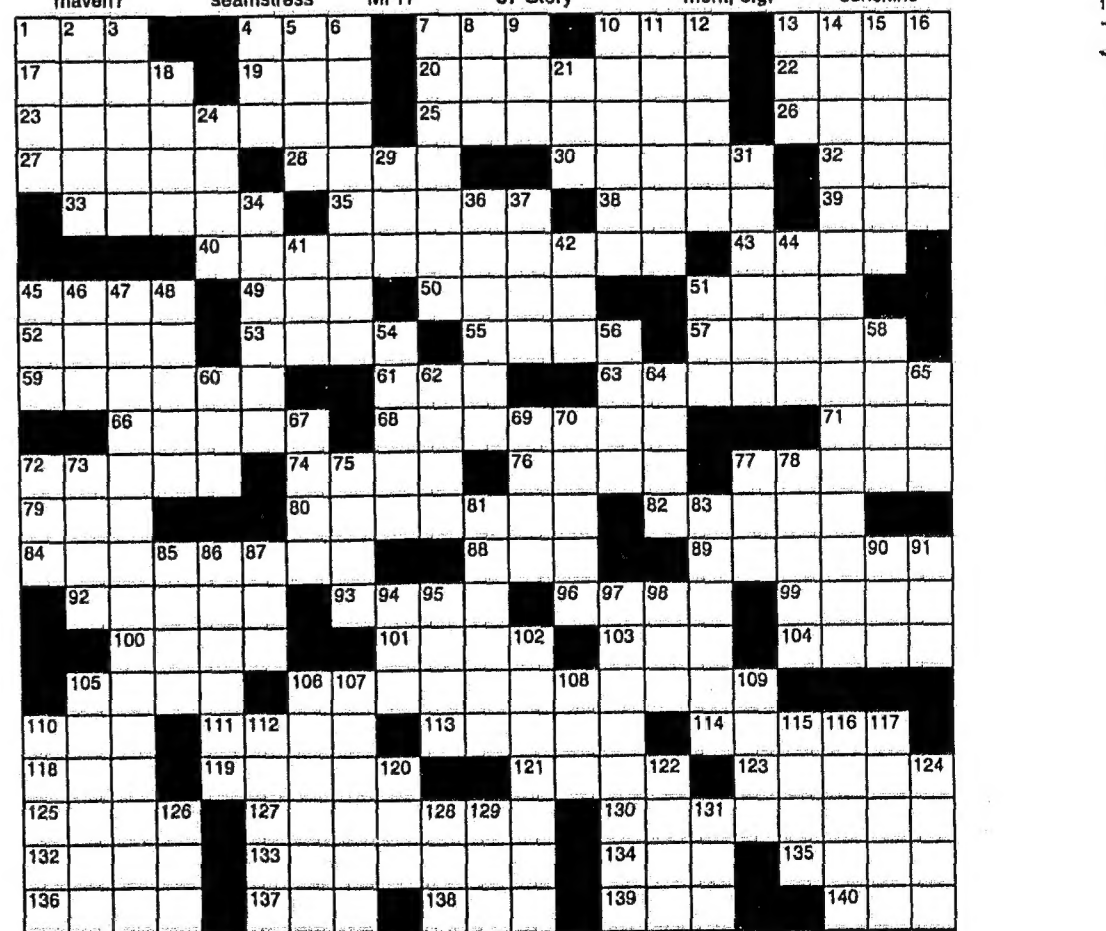

But that was a long time ago and I had forgotten all about s-t-r-e-t-c-h pants until not too long ago. Let me tell you, they have made me change my mind about polyester, elastic waste band pants as a source of comfort.

At first I was a little leery about them. I tried a pair on that must have been made for Amazon Annie because I had about a foot too much pant leg. When my pantyhose are too long I just luck the excess material under my feet and put my shoes on and go on my way.

That doesn't work with s-t-r-e-t-c-h pants because I tried it. I had one heck of a time forcing my shoes on over all that material and once I got them on, it looked like I didn't have home. Hannah and Jelly even leaped the sound of his pickup and met him at the pasture gate every day. Rupert had provided corn stalks, overgrown beets, broccoli and cabbage treats to the cows and cabbage to the chickens. I'm disappointed in one thing, though. Four of our eight chickens, which were all supposed to be pullets, turned into roosters while we were gone. I think it must have been that special diet that Rupert provided.

While traveling, we spent the weekend of Sept. 16, 17 and 18 with my daughter, Anita, and her husband, Dan, in Olympia, Wash. Our visit included camping near Olympic National Park and driving around the Olympic peninsula. The weather was beautiful, and I fell in love with the undeveloped nature of the area — until I remembered the dismal rainy, foggy and cloudy weather they enjoy most of the year.

Anita recently began working at a new job with the Department of Fisheries in Washington, a change from her previous experience with bird surveys. She has spent quite a few days at sea with commercial salmon fishermen, testing a new model of fish net, which was intended to reduce the mortality of unintended catches (immature salmon and other fish). She said that doesn't work as hoped, so — back to the drawing boards.

The day we left, Anita was headed for a fish hatchery near Seattle, to study a new way of "wandering" salmon, using an electronic wand to count salmon which were carrying tiny wires, implanted at the hatchery before releasing the salmon smolts into the streams. Returning adult salmon still carry the implants and are "wanded" in an effort to see how many of which hatchery fish return to their release points.

At the same time, Dan, who works for a wholesale tree nursery, was leaving for Portland, Ore., with a crew of laborers to try and pick 200 pounds of white birch seeds from a grove of trees there. Now, 200 pounds of birch seeds must be a lot of seeds; they are tiny little devils.

Dan said he had been out on several tree-seed collecting expeditions, gathering seeds for next year's crop of different types of trees, from roadside shrubbery to oak, plum and various types of evergreen trees. It is pretty interesting to deal with the various owners of target trees to get permission to harvest the seeds, from private owners, state highway departments, national forests, state parks, and the like. I had never thought about how nurseries went about gathering seeds for their stocks.

October's bright blue weather eluded us last weekend. Nevertheless, the foliage was magnificent. The sun twinkled in and out on Sunday shining on the colorful wet leaves. The Lake was calm and black, mirroring the wonderful color surrounding it. Actually, with Columbus Day already here, we are fortunate to have leaves still on the trees.

Now that the kids are back in school, the sneezing and coughing is rampant. It seems that each household has a member with a cold.

Sue Nelson has removed the summer flowers from the church and replaced them with fall flowers. The two doors have wreaths in the colors of fall. It is pretty enough to be on a postcard.

Jim Yarnell spent a few days in the hospital recently but is doing much better. Attaboy, Jim.

The Canada jays have returned on schedule for their fall handout. Last year, Norm and Phyllis Dock came up from Bethel to see them. She enjoyed watching the birds a lot. We offer our sympathy to the Dock family on their loss. She was truly a unique person.

Several people in town attended the Fryeburg Fair. The Wixoms and Kenneys went on Monday. The Largesses spent most of the week at the fair using their camper trailer for a base. The Harris family also came from New York and Massachusetts to attend what they deem the best fair in the Northeast.

There is a rush to accomplish outdoor tasks, and the rain didn't help. The Harris family has a beautiful new roof with skylights. If it ever stops raining we, too, will get a new roof.

Paul Casey is anxious to get a warm, dry day to paint and apply claddings to the winter house.

Rodney Harris has been very busy adding an addition to his home on the East B Hill Road. Incidentally, the view on the East B Hill Road is magnificent.

Last week, we had a visit from Lionel and Jeanette Roy. They brought us delicious plums from their own tree and a huge cabbage.

Dan Corcoran, his son Matt and friends are spending a week at their camp for some bird hunting.

I think the partridge should be the "Bird of the Week." This is one of the most desired game birds in North America. Many are taken every year to provide a wonderful fall meal. The habitat remains suitable with forests and evergreen pastureland so they are able to withstand the pressure of the hunt. This chicken-like bird has many enemies and although large numbers of eggs are laid only a few of young grouse reach maturity. In the spring the male courts his lady friends by sitting on a log, beating the air with his wings creating a rapidly increasing drumming sound. The ladies just love it and vie for his attention. In the winter grouse grow comb-like bristles on their toes, which serve as snowshoes. We often see them across the road in the late winter and early spring budding on young poplar trees.

Ginny Williamson observed a flock of ducks being attacked by an immature bald eagle. He made several passes only to be thwarted by the ducks diving into the water just as he swooped down.

The Williamsons also observed a cow moose and her young one on the lawn. Mom and baby were minding their own business when a big, black bull routed the young moose and then escorted his lady-love off into the woods. Mother Nature strikes again.

The Lockes Mills Union Church Sunday School is in session. All children, nursery through age 12, are invited. Youth from age 13 or older are invited to join the youth group. Classes will begin on Sunday morning in worship beginning at 9 a.m.

Andy and I visited Fritz and Norma Peterson at their home in Lewiston Saturday. There is a new addition to the machine shop out back, which nearly doubles its size. Steve will have a new office, which is badly needed now it is the computer age. All this technology needs more space for all the machines. By the time one gets outfitted with computer, printer, copier, etc., a room fills up fast. Fritz and Norma are both feeling better, although Fritz had a bad day on Friday. He still has to go back in the hospital for treatment on the 15th and 16th, but hopefully that will end the need for hospital stay for a while. Hospital stays are nice when one needs them, but one prefers not to need them.

The fall colors are in full dress right now. It is really beautiful along Route 26 near South Paris. Wherever there is water, the colors get really bright and varied. We are fortunate to live in Maine.

I wonder how many people will get killed at that miserable intersection across from Rite Aid before the powers that be will decide a light is needed. Somehow it seems a bit ridiculous to wait when everyone knows that it will have to be installed eventually.

Those statistics that have to show it is needed are someone's loved one or someone's life cut short. I know that people don't like lights but how long does one have to wait usually? I have counted the seconds at lights and the range seems to be from eight to 30 seconds at most lights. Seems a small price to pay for better safety.

As for the initial installation cost, it may seem like a lot but spread over a period of years, and one should last for years, it can't be all that much. It is odd that the general public has known since the beginning that it is a dangerous intersection but those in authority either have blinders on or are hampered by some rule that probably was misguidedly to start with. Ah, sweet mysteries of life.

I was very pleased to see that Dr. Alan D. Verrill, an internist, has been appointed to the CMMC medical staff at 12 High Street, Lewiston. Prior to beginning in the Lewiston/Auburn area he served as a staff internist at the Air Force Academy in Colorado. During his time with the Air Force Medical Corps, he attained the rank of major. He is certified by the American Board of Internal Medicine. He is also certified in Advanced Cardiac Life Support and Critical Air Transport.

meeting on Monday, Oct. 1, with present, Laura Hutchins read a poem she found in the secretary items. It was voted to have the Ma-hoosuc tour of Grange Halls on March 31 with a 5 p.m. supper and a 6:30 p.m. program. This was agriculture night and the program was as follows: opening thought, "Thank God for Farmers"; opening song, "Shine on Harvest Moon"; speaker was George Gibbs, agriculture chairman; poem, "When I Grow Old," by Lucy Robbins; whistling by Dot Canwell; mystery march; closing thought, "Bless be the tie that binds" and a silent auction was held.

Recently Annie Cröckett took a ride down memory lane, Maurice and Cecile Lescault took her to her hometown of New Gloucester. She visited her old homestead, the school she graduated from, the town library and remembered friends and neighbors she had then and where they lived. It was a very informative visit and very beautiful country. Carolyn Taylor, Annie's niece, was on the trip, also, to help jar Annie's memory whenever it was needed. Annie did very well remembering. They also went to the cemetery where her parents and family are buried. They all had a great time and ate dinner at the Cole Farm. What a busy place. Annie's next excursion will be her foliage trip to New Hampshire. She is looking forward to that, also.

Patch the Pirate Club meets each Wednesday evening at 6:30 p.m., same time as prayer meeting, at the Baptist Church. Thursday evening at 6 p.m. is visitation. Sunday services are Sunday School and Adult Fellowship at 9:15 a.m., morning service at 10:30 a.m. and evening service at 6 p.m. Something new -- fellowship time is on Sunday at 8:45 before Sunday School. Franklin Grange will meet on Oct. 16.

The Woodstock Extension will meet on Wednesday, Oct. 18, at the Town Annex for a 10:30 a.m. meeting and workshop on items for the holiday open house. Please bring a brown bag lunch.

Recent visitors of Edith Hathaway have been Douglas Jordan and children and Ray and Vance Jordan.

Recent callers on Beatrice Far-num have been Arthur and Jane Wardwell and Danjean Reynolds.

From the

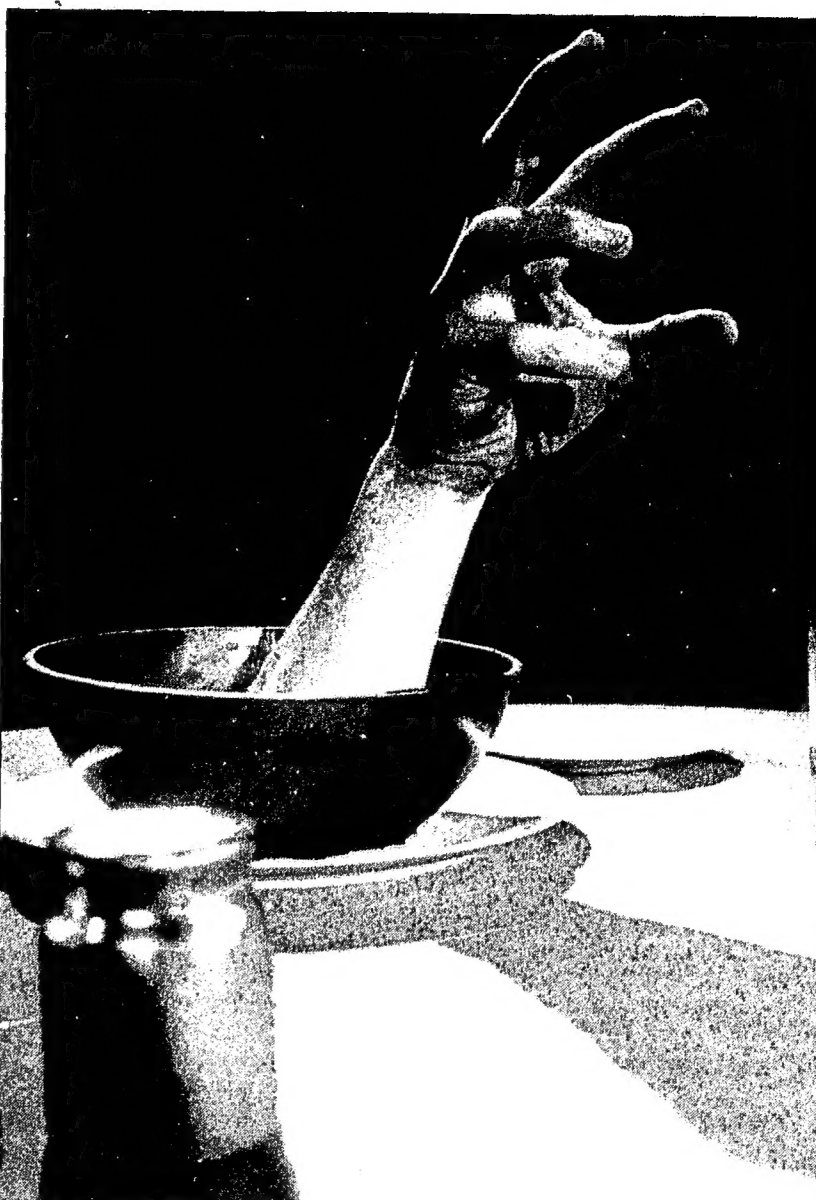

Bethel Historical Society's Regional History Center

Linda Farr Macgregor of Rumford, the featured speaker at the Oct. 5 Bethel Historical Society lecture, provided a brief overview of her oral history project, which involved more than 80 interviews with a wide variety of Rumford citizens. Excerpts from these interviews and a large number of photographs will soon be published along with interpretive essays in a book commemorating Rumford in observance of the bicentenary of its incorporation. Mrs. Macgregor shared some of the reminiscences, that she had collected over the past year, with her audience. These provide a well-rounded profile of the town and the communities within it.

Society member Mary Wentzell Eichel has shared her copy of the "National Geographic Guide to Small Town Escapes" with the office staff at the Bethel Historical Society. Those with a Bethel connection throughout the country will be interested to learn that National Geographic selected two places in each state to focus upon for the book. In Maine, Bethel was selected along with Castine. In the Bethel article, Society Director Stan Howe is quoted several times and the society's Regional History Center is cited as one of the features to visit while in the town.

Volunteers are the lifeblood of most nonprofit organizations. The Bethel Historical Society is no exception. More than 100 individuals do at least one task for the society each year and many spend numerous hours at a variety of endeavors. All of this makes a tremendous difference to the organization and is much appreciated by all who enjoy the benefits of this dedication. A yellowed clipping was recently discovered with this poem on it, which provides some sense of the role volunteers play:

"Many will be shocked to find/When the day of judgment nears,/That there's a special place in Heaven/Set aside for volunteers./Furnished with big recliners,/Satin couches and footstool,/Where there are no committee chairmen./No yard sales or rest area coffee to serve./No library duty or bulletin assembly./There will be nothing to print or staple./Not one thing to fold and mail./Telephone lists will be outlawed./But a finger snap will bring/Cool drinks and gourmet dinners/And treats fit for a king./You ask, 'Who will serve these privileged few/And work for all their worth?'/Way all those who reaped the benefits/And not once volunteered on earth."

'There's a Ghost in My Soup!'

The Oddfellow Theater on Route 117 in Buckfield will present its annual Halloween production this month. This year's performance is titled "There's a Ghost in My Soup!" and other short stories. The show will kick off on Friday, the 13th of October and continue on the 14th, 20th, 21st, 27th and 28th. Show time for all shows is 7 p.m. and doors open at 6:30 p.m.

From the creators of "The Legend of Ash Woods", "Strange Sighting" and "The Early Evening Show" comes "There's a Ghost in My Soup!" and other short stories. This year's production will be a mix of comic sketches, spooky tales, magic, feats of skills and for that extra touch, fire-eating and a bed of nails.

Oddfellow Theater veterans Michael Mielon and Jason Tardy will be joined this year by Morten Hansen formerly of the internationally acclaimed juggling group blink.

Tickets are available by calling the Oddfellow Theater at 336-3306, Visa and Mastercard accepted, or you may purchase tickets at Fresh Cuts Flower Shop in Buckfield village. Tickets are $8 for adults, $7 for seniors and $5 for children 12 and under. The Oddfellow Theater is located on Route 117 in Buckfield village next to Tilton's Market. For more information on upcoming shows, or to join the mailing list, call 336-3306, or visit our website at www.oddfellow.com.

From the

Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce

Welcome to new members Camp Beattelo, Maine Custom Builders, and Deertrees Theatre. Co-owners Marc Beaudoin and Jim Grattelo have built two six-bedroom log homes off Nordic Knoll Road in Newry. Sounds like a perfect "camp," eh? Maine Custom Builders' owner, Francis Dumont of Bethel, designs and builds commercial and residential buildings. Deertrees Theatre of Harrison is grateful for all the Bethel area patrons and wants to encourage more of them.

Volunteers from Telstar Middle School's seventh-grade class made short work of collating our October newsletter recently. A big thank you to advisor Mary Richardson and three students: Mia Stucchi Hawthorne, Justin Merchant (aka Mini-Merch.) and Dan Kiesel (aka Diesel Weasel Kiesel). Seventh-graders have all committed to many hours of community service, so think of them if you have a project.

Don't forget to reserve space in the Winter Map/Guide. We would love to have your logo and copy by Monday, Oct. 16. Name, address, telephone number, logo and 55 words cost $105. Make sure visitors can find you. Call the chamber office at 824-2282 if you have questions.

The Summit Hotel at Sunday River Ski Resort hosted a free community networking breakfast yesterday. Candidates from Western Maine running for the Legislature gave informative updates. Thank you, Sunday River and all involved.

The annual guidebook, the show-piece brochure for our chamber members and the area, is underway at member, Grassroots Graphics. Stay tuned for its unveiling.

From the

White Mountain National Forest

A new first-aid cache sits at the base of Tuckerman Ravine on Mount Washington, thanks to the continuing generosity of the family of Arnold P. Mork, an avid skier and mountain lover who died many years ago. His family has made several memorial donations to the Mount Washington Volunteer Ski Patrol and the U.S. Forest Service with the intent of enhancing the safety of visitors who venture onto the mountain. Through the years their donations have funded many important first aid supplies and search and rescue gear.

Their recent generosity purchased new state-of-the-art rescue litters and the first aid cache to store them in. The cache was installed last month near Lunch Rocks with its gear ready to be called into service in case of an emergency.

The structure replaces the former first aid cache on the site, which was too narrow to house the new rescue litters. The litters had been stored outside through last winter, causing numerous problems for search and rescue personnel, as they sometimes had to dig the litters out from piles of snow and deal with wet or frozen straps, blankets and other first aid supplies. The new slightly wider cache is the same length and sits in the same location as the former cache.

The first aid cache was flown in from Camp Dodge using a helicopter that was in the area to re-supply the Appalachian Mountain Club's high-country huts. The helicopter also flew the old structure out.

Forest Service Snow Ranger Brad Ray supervised the project, noting, "Once again the family of Arnold Mork has made Tuckerman Ravine a safer place. Our thanks to them for their concern for the safety of visitors to the ravine."

Pastor & Mrs. Linwood Hanson

Thank You!

I had a wonderful time at my 80th Birthday Celebration. Happiness is knowing folks like you. Love is shared in many ways.

Thanks Again,
Ada

Thank You

Dear Relatives, Friends, Church Congregations, Prayer Groups, and all who prayed for me and my family during my hospitalization. Truly "my cup runneth over".

It is very humbling but uplifting to be surrounded by so much "prayer power", as well as the mass of cards, notes, and letters that gave us courage and hope. Words are inadequate to express our grateful thanks for the time, effort, and love expressed to us. Cristle, "Faith, Trust, Hope". Your card came as I was waking up. I had Reynold pin it on the wall where I could see those words day and night. Genia, you and my Aunt Bea truly inspired me, as did most of my 93 year old Mother's daily letters! Indeed God has been good to me.

It is great to be home. Thank you Harriet, Bessie, and Shirley for the wonderful meals you have brought to us. Someone left a lovely ruffled African Violet for us to find; please let us know who you are; I'm sorry we did not hear you. In deep humble gratitude Rey and I thank each of you, as we praise God for the blessings of family and friends.
